PEDIGREES FOR THE RICH.

Tracing High Descent for American Millionaires.

London Mail.

The anxiety of some wealthy Americans to trace their pedigrees back to "our old nobility" was amusingly illustrated yesterday in a case before Mr. Justice Lawrence.

Aloysius Joseph Gordon Kane, a retired lieutenant in the British army, sued the London General Omnibus Company for damages for a broken arm due to the alleged negligence of the company's servants while he was boarding an omnibus.

The plaintiff's counsel stated that his client devoted himself to genealogical inquiries for wealthy Americans who desired to connect their families with noble houses in England. His average earnings were £600 a year.

Cross-examined, the plaintiff said that when the accident occurred he was engaged upon three pedigree cases. He had been one of the witnesses at a party given one for nine years, and one for four years.

His Lordship—"Your clients don't seem to be in a hurry."

The Plaintiff—"They are rich people—millionaires."

His Lordship—"If you have luck, they may last another twenty-two years."

Mr. McCull (for the defense)—"Are you paid by results?"

His Lordship—"I suppose if anybody wants to be descended from John of Gaunt, and cannot hang him on to John of Gaunt, you get nothing."

The plaintiff replied he was paid for the work.

Ultimately the jury found for the plaintiff, with £140 damages.

Had Had Experience.

Washington Post.

"I don't quite know what the lady meant," says an elderly physician, "but whatever it was, she meant it hard. She was last Tuesday and, after considering her case, I wrote a prescription, which was to be put up in capsules and taken three times a day, and whereof of this to her and asked her if she could swallow anything so big. She said, 'I can't swallow it.' 'Why, my husband belongs to two whist clubs and more than can eat me in a week,' I said. 'Humph! I reckon I haven't been married ten years without learning to swallow bigger things than that!'"

The Secret.

Nightingales warble about it. All night under blossoms and stars: The will swan is dying without it. And the eagle cries about it. Searching the green earth o'er. More than doth a man's heart mind it. Over the gray leagues of ocean The indit, yearning alone. The thing they know not in love; Creation craves but to see it. But a lover he shall be it. But a lover he shall be it. —George Edward Woodberry.

CITY'S SOCIAL LIFE.

The coat had spreading tails slashed with white satin. It too, was lined with white satin, with a rolling sailor collar tricked out with lace and gold.

Beneath it she wore a cream satin waist, trimmed with Irish point lace, belted in with a white girder. Around her neck was a high, smart stock of white tulle, with a bow of it nestling under her hair at the back. A superb set of black auburn, muffled and bon, edged with fur tails, white gloves, a black picture hat trimmed with ostrich plumes and a plain well black net set off her attire most successfully.

There was color in her finely drawn face as she tempted him to no attention to her eyes. But the glint of her showed most of all in the black ribbon band tied in a bow at the nape of her neck. On it was in letters of gold, "Yacht Meteor."

Made at a Cooking School.

Boston Transcript.

As the sandwiches were out of the ordinary process of making was followed. With a fork a ten-cent cream cheese was mashed, moistened with cream, seasoned with salt and cayenne, and then were added six finely-chopped olives, lettuce leaves finely chopped like parsley with a sharp knife, and half of one canned pineapple which had been finely cut in strips. This mixture was pressed into the original shape of the cheese, carefully covered with tin and chilled. The cheese was to serve the cheese was cut in slices, spread with mayonnaise, and after each slice had been placed on a tender slice of lettuce it was placed between two thin slices of rye bread, such as the Germans approve. This was the result. But only the outside was but to the eyes, for in the creamy cheese there was the happy blending of green of the lettuce and the red of the pimento.

Didn't Think.

New York Times.

At a recent dinner the Rev. Dr. Minot J. Savage told a story of a lady who was asked: "Do you ever think of getting married?" "Think!" she answered in asperity. "I worry."
